NSW's leading venue and catering collection unveils architect Koichi Takada's artist impressions of Doltone House, Hyde Park

Following the recent announcement of an exciting new venue address being added to the portfolio in early 2013, Doltone House | Hyde Park, Elizabeth Street Sydney, have appointed leading architect Koichi Takada to complete the interior design refurbishment to compliment the Doltone House venue signature.

Koichi Takada architects are a young and innovative practice that has developed a wide range of interiors in Sydney's hospitality, residential and cultural venues. Takada's designs are innovative and refined. "I am thrilled to be working on this exciting project with such a passionate client," said Takada.

The design includes a sweeping staircase of double stitched black leather, gold mirrors and intricate tiling creating a luxe interior, along with purpose made unique crystal chandeliers representing a modern interpretation of old-world glamour in the main ballroom. The Hyde Park Ballroom will blend heritage features of the grand arched windows, three stunning sandstone fireplaces, with a dramatic contrast of black and gold highlights. The use of rich black and metallic tones is offset with neutral creams to give a fresh, clean and unquestionably sophisticated elegance.

The contemporary elegance is transpired to the Manhattan and Avenue Rooms and offers a lighter palette of creams combined with sapphire blue in New York style. Traditional hospitality meets the innovative and new to create the ultimate in contemporary chic.

"We are delighted with the first stage of the design process and we are now working closely with Koichi Takada for its implementation", said Paul Signorelli, Executive Chairman, Doltone House.

The venue itself boasts 5metre high ceilings with an abundance of natural light via floor to ceiling spectacular windows and uninterrupted views of Sydney's Hyde Park.

Doltone House is renowned in Sydney for providing multi award-winning, iconic venues for conferences and events. The Doltone property portfolio, which includes the iconic properties; Sylvania Waters, Jones Bay Wharf, Darling Island Wharf and now Hyde Park – has seen Doltone House establish a reputation as one of Australia's premier industry players.
